Parallel Lines: Shaping Artistic Vision in a Professional World

André Perry is executive director of Hancher Auditorium and the Office of Performing Arts and Engagement at the University of Iowa. Perry joined Hancher in May 2022 after serving as the UI's director of arts, engagement, and inclusion and senior advisor to the associate vice president and executive officer of diversity, equity, and inclusion. He was executive director of the Englert Theatre for 11 years, helping elevate it into a nationally recognized arts venue. Perry co-founded the Mission Creek Festival and Witching Hour Festival and helped launch the Strengthen Grow Evolve campaign, a fundraising partnership with FilmScene. He earned an MFA from the UI's Nonfiction Writing Program and served as an assistant adjunct professor for the program. Perry advises students on MFA thesis projects and his debut nonfiction book, Some of Us Are Very Hungry Now, was hailed by NPR as "extraordinary." He is active on several boards, including the National Independent Venue Association, Arts Midwest, and Iowa Arts Council.
