PROGRAM NOTES AND COMPOSERS BIOGRAPHIES

Anna Clyne (b. 1980) “A Thousand Mornings” (2020)

Commissioned by Penny Wright & Andrew Neubauer, written for and premiered by The Fidelio Trio. Composed in the height of the COVID-19 Lockdown in 2020, A Thousand Mornings draws inspiration from a poem by Mary Oliver of the same title. The short but evocative poem is written as a stream of consciousness, a process that is mirrored in the music, which moves in twists and turns between different musical realms. In her poem, Oliver reminds us of the beauty and predictability of nature and that we will always get through difficult and dark times.

“A Thousand Mornings”
All night my heart makes its way
however, it can over the rough ground of uncertainties, but only until night meets and then is overwhelmed by morning, the light deepening, the wind easing and just waiting, as I too wait (and when have I ever been disappointed?) for redbird to sing”

Mary Oliver (1935-2019)

Described as a “composer of uncommon gifts and unusual methods” in a New York Times profile and as “fearless” by NPR, GRAMMY-nominated Anna Clyne is one of the most in-demand composers today, working with orchestras, choreographers, filmmakers, and visual artists around the world. Clyne was named by Bachtrack as one of the top ten most performed contemporary composers in the world and the most performed living female British composer in both 2022 and 2023.

Clyne has been commissioned and presented by the world’s most dynamic and revered arts institutions, including the Barbican, Carnegie Hall, Kennedy Center, Los Angeles Philharmonic, MoMA, Philharmonie de Paris, Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra, San Francisco Ballet, and the Sydney Opera House; and her music has opened such events as the Edinburgh International Festival, The Last Night of the Proms, and the New York Philharmonic's season.

Piers Hellawell (b. 1956) - Arrowhead (world premiere) (2023)

This piano trio was written in spring of 2023 for the Fidelio Trio, and premiered by them at the The University of Iowa, on 21 February 2024.

Although I have worked extensively with Fidelio Trio for some years, I had never written for them a ‘pure’ trio: they have toured my 2008 Etruscan Games widely, and recorded it - but it was written for other musicians. Their 2016 commission Up By The Roots, meanwhile, is a collaboration with the Irish poet Sinéad Morrissey, a meditation on migration in which the speaker's words gradually blend into the musical texture. Thus, I wanted to write a ‘plain’ piano trio specifically for these artists – not only because by now I know them so well, but because it is typically my practice to imagine musicians as I write.

The trio returns to a common formal preoccupation of mine, the production of a suite of movements that are closely related. Specifically, I have explored in a number of works the structure of three movements, in which each ‘draws nearer’ to the same material – like three views, taken from the distance, middle-ground and close up; I called this my ‘Russian Doll’ preoccupation. In that structure the detail intensifies, the pieces thus becoming longer by turns. For Arrowhead I explored the reverse: the title describes the intensification toward a point, when an extended first movement is progressively compressed in a second version, and further concentrated in movement three. In that way, the progressing events are the same, but they come upon the listener more briskly. However, the three movements are (whether expanding or contracting) essentially the same piece! It is a different kind of listening from that to a classical trio with its balanced moods, for each movement treats the same sequence and indeed materials; it is a triple hearing of the same music.

Each movement of Arrowhead is itself tripartite: first comes an alternation of two moods; a middle section profiles solo lines for one particular voice; a climax then heralds a coda that subsides into stillness. –Piers Hellawell, 2024

Piers Hellawell, born in England and studied at Oxford University, was appointed when 24 to a composition post at The Queen’s University of Belfast, where, since 2002, he has been Professor of Composition. His family home is in Northern Scotland; his sixty or so published works owe their genesis to that working environment. Working away from England through his career has encouraged Hellawell’s detached attitude to centralized musical fashions; in his teaching and writing about music, as in composition, he advocates traditional training as a platform for individuality, and expresses an aversion to obvious solutions. David Gompper (b. 1954) – Piano Trio (2010)

Piano Trio (2010) is a work that reflects an idea that could be held in a “triplet state”, meaning musical cells that have positive, negative, and neutral spins, much like a tennis ball that turns up, down, or sideways. Those ideas are placed in space (foreground, middle ground, background), and in different registers (high, middle, low). Pitch and rhythmic cells bind three contrasting elements into a single idea, and that are themselves extended to longer phrases in compound threes (3x5, 3x7, etc.), with movement over time that relies on counterpoint for drive and energy. The form, a double triplet (3 smaller sections within a larger tripartite structure), provides contrast throughout the 12’ work. Post-tonal processes control intervals generating the pitch language, operations that help to keep the material in check and constantly evolving. But all of this is to say that I simply maintained control over the ideas, and composed the piece as I heard it, using a formal framework and a series of rules that helped me keep true to the opening motives. What is perceived is a sequence of dialogues between all three instruments, spinning in three different angles and trajectories. –David Gompper, 2024

He studied at the Royal College of Music in London with composers Jeremy Dale Roberts and Humphrey Searle, and pianist Phyllis Sellick, and conductor Norman Del Mar. After teaching in Nigeria, he received his doctorate from the University of Michigan and taught at the University of Texas, Arlington. Since 1991, he has been professor of composition and director of the Center for New Music at the University of Iowa. In 2002-2003 Gompper was a Fulbright Scholar, teaching, performing, and conducting at the Moscow Conservatory. He received an Academy Award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 2009, a Fromm Commission in 2013, and a Guggenheim Fellowship in 2020. Gompper’s compositions have been performed at Carnegie Hall; Lincoln Center and Merkin Halls (New York); Wigmore Hall (London); Konzerthaus (Vienna); and the Bolshoi, Rachmaninoff, and Small Halls (Moscow Conservatory). For the Albany label, he has produced 12 CDs of contemporary music since 2003.

Ravel's Trio dates from the Spring and Summer of 1914. The international situation at the time was worsening and Ravel was affected both spiritually and mentally by the impending catastrophe. He was accepted into the Army in 1915, and the first movement of the Trio probably reflects Ravel's anxiety. Its main theme is based on four repetitions of seven chords with a swaying rhythm. This is introduced by the piano, then joined by the strings, and by the end of the movement what remains of this theme is a tolling rhythm in the bottom register of the piano. By the time Ravel's brother and his friends were called up the streets were buzzing with what Ravel described as a “horrible enthusiasm”. “I fear that I'm going to go mad, or give way to this obsession” remarked Ravel. The second movement of the Trio, entitled Pantoum, is overtly obsessive; an extraordinary movement that combines elements of scherzo, lied and rondo, full of sparkling wit and vigour. In the middle of the movement, under the rhythmic energy of the violin, a beautifully lyrical tune emerges from the piano, and the movement ends with huge statements of the initial material.

Then we are plunged into the Passacaille the theme which is introduced in the depths of the piano and taken over first by the cello and then the violin, which climbs ever higher and higher. The climax is reached chordally and when the theme is recapitulated it moves, in a diminuendo, in the opposite direction: violin, cello and finally piano, left hand taking over from right hand, leading the melody back to silence. The last movement explodes into life with surging arpeggios and pattering semiquavers. A fanfare of chords bursts out in F sharp major calling for victory and purging the effect of the sombre Passacaille.

A monumental work, this is a Trio conceived on a big scale with broad themes. The resources of the instruments are exploited to the fullest degree and we see the complete expression of Ravel's genius.
